

ABOUT THE JOURNAL J.K. TIMES

In its 70 year history, the college has shown various signs of horizontal and vertical academic growth. By the time the college had contemplated publishing a multi-disciplinary journal in 2005, there were sixteen (under-graduate and post-graduate) departments in existence. The idea of bringing out such a journal was chiefly to inculcate a sense of inter-disciplinary exchange amongst various disciplines occupying broad areas of common knowledge and perception. The second but no less important notion of publishing such a broad-ranging platform was to provide the faculty from various disciplines, both experienced and fresh, with the scope to express multiple concepts and varied perceptions. The journal at present represents almost all the nineteen departments belonging to Arts, Science and Commerce, and serves as a brilliant platform for multiple intellectual perceptions as well as inter-disciplinary discourses. Since 2012 J. K. Times has acquired ISSN registration. The journal, through its passage over time, has now achieved a very special position in the academic intelligentsia, providing a small but important space for micro level research publications.
